

International Conference

STUDYING JAPAN

Organizers:
Cornelia Reiher (Freie Universität Berlin)
and Nora Kottmann (German Institute for Japanese Studies, Tokyo)

Studying Japan:
The impact of transnationalization
and technological innovation on methods,
fieldwork and research ethics

JAPAN

July 23 and 24, 2019

Fabeckstraße 23-25, Freie Universität Berlin
Holzlaube Room 2.2058 and 2.2059

Conference Program

Tuesday, July 23

14.30 - 15.00 Registration

15.00 - 15.15 Welcome

Nora Kottmann (German Institute for Japanese Studies, Tokyo) and Cornelia Reiher (Freie Universität Berlin)

15.15 - 16.30 Panel I: Methods and fieldwork in the area studies and global flows of knowledge

Chair: Cosima Wagner (Freie Universität Berlin)

- Keeping up with multigenerational research: Methodological lessons from following Soka Gakkai in Japan over two decades
Levi McLaughlin (North Carolina State University)
- Asking without asking... Getting your 'enchanted listener' to talk! Interviewing single women in Japan
Akiko Yoshida (University of Wisconsin)

16.30 - 17.00 Coffee break

17.00 - 18.30 Roundtable 'Methods in Japanese Studies: New trends and challenges'

Chair: Verena Blechinger-Talcott (Freie Universität Berlin)

- Joy Hendry (Oxford Brookes University)
- Christopher McMorran (National University of Singapore)

- Karen Shire (University of Duisburg-Essen)
- Celia Spoden (Hannover Medical School)
- Marie Weishaupt (Freie Universität Berlin)

18.30 Dinner

Wednesday, July 24

9.00 - 9.30 Input

Nora Kottmann (German Institute for Japanese Studies, Tokyo) and Cornelia Reiher (Freie Universität Berlin)

9.30 - 11.00 Panel II: Studying Japan. Crossing disciplinary, methodological and territorial boundaries

Chair: Annette Schad-Seifert (Heinrich Heine University Düsseldorf)

- The diversity of Japanese Studies
Rodger Goodman (University of Oxford)
- Research designs
Kaori Okano (La Trobe University) (via Skype)
- Reviewing the literature
Matthias Zachmann (Freie Universität Berlin)
- Studying Japan in and out of Japan
Levi McLaughlin (North Carolina State University)

11.00 - 11.30 Coffee break

11.30 - 13.00 Panel III: Collecting data in social science research on Japan

Chair: Kai Schulze (Freie Universität Berlin)

- Qualitative social science methods
Akiko Yoshida (University of Wisconsin)
- Qualitative interviews
Nora Kottmann (German Institute for Japanese Studies, Tokyo) and Katrin Ullmann (University of Applied Science Düsseldorf)
- (Participant) observation
Christian Tagsold (Heinrich Heine University Düsseldorf) and Katrin Ullmann (University of Applied Science Düsseldorf)

- Digital transformations in archives, libraries and databases
Theresia Peucker and Cosima Wagner (Freie Universität Berlin)

13.00 - 14.00 Lunch

14.00 - 14.30 Student panel: What should a methods handbook look like?

Japanese Studies Students (Freie Universität Berlin)

14.30 - 16.00 Panel IV: Analyzing qualitative data in social science research on Japan

Chair: Hannes Mosler (Freie Universität Berlin)

- Mixed-methods designs
Carola Hommerich (Hokkaido University/Sophia University) (via Skype) and Nora Kottmann (German Institute for Japanese Studies, Tokyo)

- Methods of data analysis
David Chiavacci (University of Zürich)

- Qualitative content and frame analysis
Celeste Arrington (George Washington University)
- Qualitative discourse analysis
Cornelia Reiher (Freie Universität Berlin)

16.00 - 16.30 Coffee break

16.30 - 18.00 Panel V: Presenting research on Japan. Writing and publishing on- and offline

Chair: Elisabeth Scherer (Heinrich Heine University Düsseldorf)

- Coding and theorizing
Caitlin Meagher (University of Oxford)
- The challenges of writing and putting it all together
Chris McMorran (National University of Singapore)
- Good research practice and ethics
Cornelia Reiher and Cosima Wagner (Freie Universität Berlin)
- Presenting and publishing
James Farrer (Sophia University) and Gracia Liu-Farrer (Waseda University)

18.00 - 18.30 Wrap up

Nora Kottmann (German Institute for Japanese Studies, Tokyo) and Cornelia Reiher (Freie Universität Berlin)