Course contents:
The term “New Age” refers to a religious and cultural movement that began in the 1960s. However, the foundation for the movement had been laid long before. In the 19th and early 20th centuries, a variety of individuals and organizations among them Helena P. Blavatsky and the Theosophical Society as well as internationally renowned scholars in fields such as comparative mythology and comparative religion paved the way for the movement’s rise. Then, in the 1970s, the movement developed a social and political component. Today, we can see a popularized form of New Age that breaks down the boundaries between “privatized” and “public” religion and is part of a competitive market in which producers compete with each other to satisfy the wants of consumers. In this seminar, we first discuss the main characteristics of what is referred to by scholars as “New Age” or “modern esotericism.” Subsequently, we will focus on concrete manifestations of New Age religion and place these in a historical framework. Special attention will be paid to C.G. Jung’s theory of archetypes, Goddess spirituality, and channeling.

Literature:
A detailed syllabus with additional information about the exam formate (a paper), program, reading list with texts to be read and additional material which can be used for study and discussion is to be found below.
Learning goals:
The objective of this seminar is to provide students with a general theoretical framework that is relevant for the academic study of the New Age Movement. Moreover, in this course, students will improve their presentation and writing skills. Specific learning goals:
• Familiarity with the discussions and methodological approaches in the socio-scientific and historical study of New Age
• Knowledge and understanding of the origins, background and development of New Age
• Skills in discussion, oral presentation, writing a small paper and research on the internet

Format:
This course will have the format of both lecture and seminar, which means that active participation of students is essential. Although the instructor will give detailed information by means of lectures, work will also be done in collaboration with the students who will introduce readings of the respective week and discuss and present their own ideas. In addition, a paper has to be written.

Assignments and grade breakdown:
Preparation for and active participation in class is compulsory. Workload: lectures/tutorials (7 x 2 hours): 14 hours; contribution to Nestor discussion forum: 8 hours (20% of final grade); group presentation and QARQ: 12 hours (40% of final grade); short paper: 18 hours (40% of final grade); expected self-study: 88 hours.

A presentation by a student will take 15-25 minutes. Because all students will have read the preparatory literature, it is essential not just to repeat the content of the reading, but (a) to highlight the crucial argument/modes of narrative or discourse, (b) provide more information about the context (e.g., the author, the rest of the book, debates that underlie the text, reviews of the book/article, etc.), and (c) to extract a couple of questions or critical remarks that should be discussed in class. The use of handouts is required; Power-Point presentations including images are strongly encouraged. The presentations (even if in preliminary form) have to be sent to the instructor at least five days before the session, otherwise 1.0 will be subtracted from the grade for this assignment. Each student will be responsible for 2 presentations. These will make for 40% (2 x 20%) of the final grade.

In consultation with the instructor, students will write a term paper of 4,000–5,000 words (incl. footnotes and references). Papers should focus on a relevant academic question, make use of primary and secondary literature, and should employ standard rules of argumentation, citation systems, and bibliography. Term papers require an ability to critically engage with literature that lies outside the required readings. The instructor will comment on a preliminary version of the paper, if that is submitted before 24 May 2013. The final version is due 1 June 2013 and will make for 40% of the final grade.

Re-examination:
The weighed final grade has to be satisfactory (5.5). If the final grade is unsatisfactory, students can repeat one of the assignments that were unsatisfactory. All material has to be handed in by 7 June 2013.
